THE UNIVERSITY OF OREGON SCHOOL OF LAW IS ON THE RISE AND FIRST IN STATE

The University of Oregon School of Law distinguishes itself once again as a top law school in the Pacific Northwest, according to U.S. News and World Report. Oregon Law rose to 85 in the nation, slightly up from last year's rank of 86. The school boasts three top-ranked specialty programs that are among the best in the nation: Legal Writing (3), Dispute Resolution (8) and Environmental Law (11). Oregon Law's overall ranking places it first in the state and second among law schools in the region. Oregon's Legal Writing is the top-ranked program in the Northwest.

"We are honored that, in a highly competitive field, the University of Oregon School of Law is recognized among the nation's best. The ranking acknowledges the depth and breadth of faculty scholarship and the hard work of the entire Law School community. It also reflects the tremendous support that the Law School receives from the University of Oregon and our alumni and friends," said Marci Lynn Burke, Dean and Frohnmayer Chair in Leadership and Law.

In the fall, the law school welcomed Dean Burke, adding to the school's strengths in environmental law. The dean's areas of expertise include environmental and natural resources, leadership, and property law. In the coming academic year, the school will welcome a new faculty member in Criminal Law and anticipates launching several faculty searches that will anchor new areas of expertise and enhance existing strengths.

In addition, the Master of Laws program at Oregon Law has been selected among the top 10 for Alternative Dispute Resolution by LLM Guide.
